For visitors of all ages

The Krannert Art Museum opened in 1961. Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Krannert provided funds for the building and these were supplemented by contributions from the Class of 1908 through the University of Illinois Foundation.

University students, members of the public, very young children, area school classes, and adult interest groups visit the Museum frequently and participate in its programs.

Collections to enjoy

Permanent collections provide a visual review of art history. Egyptian sculpture, Greek vases, medieval stained glass, renaissance paintings, English silver, contemporary American paintings and prints, Indian miniatures, Chinese porcelains, Pre-Columbian textiles are among the many original objects that are enjoyed by Museum visitors.

Area residents, University alumni, corporations, and students have been the principal donors of art objects and purchase funds that have built the collections.

Programs that interpret

Exhibitions during each season bring together related art objects from important private and public collections in other parts of the United States and abroad. These concentrated selections offer excellent opportunities for special study. Within each year, exhibitions represent many periods of history and include many kinds of art.

Lectures and films are presented to increase knowledge of the collections and exhibitions; discussions are conducted for many educational groups; and catalogues are published to provide historical and technical information.
